MAIN FINDINGS

Regarding 'carbon neutrality and climate change', the needs for reducing food wastes to solve the global hunger problem and to practice carbon neutrality was suggested. Also, It was suggested to replace fossil fuels used in the agricultural production process with renewable energy and to convert livestock manure into energy. Especially, the importance of practicing carbon neutrality in the livestock industry was emphasized.

Regarding the 'expanding the environment-friendly agriculture and livestock industry', the policy support for the expansion of environment-friendly agriculture was demanded, and in this regard, the expansion of public food procurement and public meal service, and the establishment of environment-friendly agriculture complex were suggested.

The importance of environment-friendly consumption was also emphasized. In order to promote the environment-friendly consumption, the expansion of education to build trust and consensus on the environment-friendly consumption was suggested.

To build sustainable food system in the regional level, the needs for promoting youth farmers and securing basic income for farmers were suggested. Also, the importance of providing adequate settlement conditions for rural communities and securing access to food for the elderly was emphasized. In addition, the needs for strengthening agricultural accident insurance to secure sustainability, introducing a food consumption expiration date labeling system, and fostering regional experts on building a sustainable local food system were also discussed.
